QA Edge Announces 2005 Schedule for Computer Validation Boot Camp™

WILMINGTON, DE– QA Edge, Inc. announced today its 2005 Computer Validation Boot Camp™ schedule. This rigorous, information-packed, five-day training session covers Computer Validation and 21 CFR Part 11 compliance. The interactive sessions are designed for up to 12 people and can be held on-site or at QA Edge's Delaware facility. Public sessions will be available six times during the course of 2005, beginning the week of January 31 through February 4.

“Validation Boot Camp is not designed for the feeble or fainthearted,” said Joseph Schenk, President and CEO of QA Edge. “This intensive, educationally-charged session covers Computer Validation and 21 CFR Part 11 from soup to nuts.”

The seminars, hosted by experienced industry professionals who have trained thousands of individuals in Computer Validation and regulatory compliance, provide the most current information about FDA's expectations regarding Computer Validation and Part 11 compliance. Each seminar includes a full set of standard operating procedures and templates in electronic format. All participants also receive a copy of the industry's best-selling book, Computer Validation: The 100 Worst Mistakes You Can Make.

“After just five days with QA Edge,” said Schenk, “participants will immediately be able to create documentation that directs projects toward meeting cost, schedule, and quality goals; employ validation efforts to manage risk; and streamline projects to achieve more profitability in technical initiatives.”

“QA Edge offers unprecedented corporate guarantees. A money-back guarantee is offered if not satisfied with the Boot Camp. With our services, we guarantee our documents will pass any FDA inspection or we will correct the documents at our cost.”
